

Money and Finance
<http://www.quickanddirtytips.com/>

The Money & Finance section of QuickandDirtyTips.com is a fun place to get easy to understand information about everything from credit cards to home mortgages. Most resources are available as podcasts (spoken to you as if on the radio) or simple to read articles. While the content of the site is free, it does have a number of auto-play video ads, meaning they start when you arrive on the page. Feel free to click the stop/close button or X button to ignore the ad.

Your first step is to head to www.quickanddirtytips.com.

When you look a bit down the page, you will see this menu bar. Hover your cursor over "Money & Finance."

You will now see lots of great options to explore. Need more info on taxes? What about credit or retirement? All of that is here.

For this example, go ahead and click on "Credit."

You will now see a number of topics on the issue of "Credit." You can even sort by the most recent or most popular if you like.

- Card 1: Should You Apply for a No-Interest Credit Card? Money Girl. The image shows a 'Bank of America' credit card application form.
- Card 2: How Borrowers Should Handle Rising Interest Rates Money Girl. The image shows a pen and a document with a 'Best interest rate' checkmark.
- Card 3: How Long Does it Take to Rebuild a Credit Score? Money Girl. The image shows a 'CREDIT REPORT' with categories: Excellent, Very Good, Good, Average, and Poor.

I'm going to click on "How Long Does it Take to rebuild a Credit Score?"

If you see this icon, it means there is an audio piece you can listen to.

If you see this icon, it means there is a video piece you can watch.

The screenshot shows an article titled "How Long Does it Take to Rebuild a Credit Score?". The author is Laura Adams, MBA, Money Girl, and the date is August 29, 2013. Below the title is a Money Girl avatar and a short description: "Money Girl tells you how long it really takes to rebuild a bad credit score." There are social sharing buttons for Facebook (5 shares), Twitter (0 tweets), Pinterest (0 pins), and Google+ (1 +1). The article text begins with a question: "Q. I have old debt that still shows up on my credit report and is hurting my credit. How long will it take to rebuild my credit score?" and starts an answer: "A. Since your credit score is calculated using data in your credit report, the key to improving it is to clean up your credit history. There are some simple, proactive". A 'CREDIT REPORT' graphic is visible at the bottom right of the article content.

Now you see an article about the topic you chose. Not only does the article contain lots of quality information, it also has links to topics relating to the one chosen.

Have fun exploring the site looking for items that are relevant to your life.
